Mentally activating the stem cells

Our body has a wonderful self-healing system. We know that and take it for granted. "Time heals all wounds" says the vernacular. But is it really the time?

For some years, researchers have been dealing with stem cells. These works are also subject to ethical change, meanwhile, the body's own stem cells are used for these treatments, which are returned to the body via blood collection and special treatment.

What is it, a stem cell and what makes it so effective?

Stem cells contain the information of our entire genome in the original, pure form. They carry our Divine Blueprint, they know how we are meant to be. Stem cells work automatically and find those places in the body that no longer correspond to our original form and repair them, they are our incorruptible, unmanageable self-healing power. Her healing work does not only extend to the physical level, her activity also clarifies the levels of the psyche and our subtle bodies. The results are measurable and repeatable.

And where is the spiritual aspect?

Damien Wynne has been working with doctors and researchers using stem cell therapy for years. The result of their collaboration is unanimous: the patient's willingness, openness and dedication to the process initiated by stem cell delivery is crucial to the depth and extent of healing. Or to put it another way: If the patient mentally supports his inner healing and his own stem cells through meditation, much, much more happens on all levels of all bodies. That's why Damien works in his groups with the mental activation of stem cells.

Do we really need the actual stem cell gift?

The answer is a clear YESNO, we can, but we do not have to, because we can also activate and support our stem cells with inner work and meditation. Our intention, the inner awareness and a regular inner address of our stem cells are essential for this.

The magic word is “Dedication”

Stem cells contain all our basic information for our body and our being. They have no "if-because" program, they do not follow ego-controlled exclusivity. Stem cells work with their own swarm intelligence by striving for the innermost Supreme Potential. Sometimes, on a personal level, we just do not know what that is, but they never forgot it, and they act accordingly when we open ourselves up to them, trusting their potency and possibilities. With dedication. When we address them with the deepest devotion and surrender to their original knowledge, which is also our original knowledge, in the energy of "Thy will be done", we feel the great joy and feel how this golden squadron emanates like an inner bee-swarm and begins its work. If we do not impose limits on them, look at them with gratitude and joy, feel at one with them, welcome them and open our hearts to them, things that we did not think possible before will happen.

But attention:
Stem cells do not compromise.

They heal completely, they work on a topic until it is really clarified. They are straightforward, incorruptible, not manipulatable. They only accept what is in the Divine Order, which corresponds to our Highest Potential, our greatest radiance. And their own highest potential is strengthened by our devotion, gratitude, love and joy for them, our cell swarm, the cells of our bodies, the clarity of our bodies.

Try it!

It's hard to describe, but if you want to be uncompromising, jump into the sea of your divinity and your inherent wisdom, clarity and love, into your Highest Potential ... and why not, try for yourself in yourself, with your own stem cells!
